RE: Audit of AT&T's Local Service Request Exchange System (LEX) and Local Exchange Navigation System (LENS)

Dear Ms. Harvey

AT&T Florida appreciates the opportunity to respond to the Draft Audit of AT&T's Local Service Request Exchange System (LEX) and Local Exchange Navigation System (LENS). AT&T has reviewed the Draft Audit Report provided to AT&T on March 23, 2010. Based on our review, there is one minor matter that should be clarified.

In Section 3.3 of the Report, the Staff expresses certain concerns regarding the ability of AT&T's back-end systems to handle the anticipated volume of orders in a production environment when CLECs fully migrate to LEX. The back-end systems utilized when placing orders through LEX are the same back-end systems that currently support LENS as well as all other interfaces such as EDI, XML and AT&T's own RNS system. To give perspective on the ability of AT&T's back-end systems to support production order volumes, AT&T is submitting with this response a summary of recent wholesale transaction volumes by interface type. This information demonstrates that AT&T's back-end systems are currently supporting high volumes of orders through the various CLEC interfaces. The interface volumes data are being submitted on a confidential basis.

Notwithstanding AT&T's comments above, AT&T Florida agrees to follow the Staff's recommendations set forth in Section 1.5 of the Report.

AT&T is not claiming confidential status for any information in the Report itself. Again, AT&T thanks you for the opportunity to respond to the Draft Report.
