Under section 54.607 of the FCC rules, if it is not possible to establish a rural rate based on “the average of the tariffed and other publicly available rates . . . charged for the same or similar services in that rural area over the same distance as the eligible service by other carriers” because no such comparable services exist in the area, the rule provides that: “If there are no tariffed or publicly available rates for such services in that rural area, or if the carrier reasonably determines that this method for calculating the rural rate is unfair, then the carrier shall submit for the state commission's approval, for intrastate rates . . . a cost-based rate for the provision of the service in the most economically efficient, reasonably available manner.”

This provision applies to TeleQuality’s service to HCP customers in rural areas of Florida.

In compliance with the above-mentioned FCC rules, TeleQuality wishes to “submit for the state commission's approval . . . a cost-based rate for the provision of the service in the most economically efficient, reasonably available manner,” along with “a justification of the proposed rural rate, including an itemization of the costs of providing the requested service.”

Accordingly,
