Comments : We the people pay for electrical services by our electrical company namely Duke Energy. Those services include many fee's which come with and include costs to operate such a company within there budget. We can not be expected to pay fee's to help a company re cooperate for not being prepared. Just as one saves for a rainy day, so should a company as large as Duke Energy. December 27th, 2017 an article was posted in the Tampa Bay Times requesting a recovery fee for services provided during Hurricane Irma. Are we saying we will allow a company to charge a fee because they failed to prepare? will we do this with all companies? I am and do NOT support a fee for a company who has failed to prepare and stand against such a proposal.
