980696-TP: Staff's Preliminary Issues List

1. For purposes of determining the cost of basic local telecommunications service appropriate for establishing a permanent universal service mechanism, what is the appropriate cost proxy model to determine the total forward-looking cost of providing basic local telecommunications service pursuant to Section 364.025(4)(b)?
2. For purposes of determining the cost of basic local telecommunications service appropriate for establishing a permanent universal service mechanism, should the total forward-looking cost of basic local telecommunications service pursuant to Section 364.025(4)(b) be determined by a cost proxy model on a basis smaller than a wire center? If so, on what basis should it be determined?
3. For purposes of determining the cost of basic local telecommunications service appropriate for establishing a permanent universal service mechanism, for each of the following categories what input values to the cost proxy model identified in Issue 1 are appropriate for each Florida LEC?
 - (a) Depreciation rates
 - (b) Cost of money
 - (c) Tax rates
 - (d) Supporting structures
 - (e) Structure sharing factors
 - (f) Fill factors
 - (g) Manholes
 - (h) Fiber cable costs
 - (i) Copper cable costs
 - (j) Drops
 - (k) Network interface devices
 - (l) Outside plant mix
 - (m) Digital loop carrier costs
 - (n) Terminal costs
 - (o) Switching costs and associated variables
 - (p) Traffic data
 - (q) Signaling system costs
 - (r) Transport system costs and associated variables

- (s) Expenses
 - (t) Other inputs
- 4. (a) For purposes of determining the cost of basic local telecommunications service appropriate for establishing a permanent universal service mechanism, for which Florida local exchange companies must the cost of basic local telecommunications service be determined using the cost proxy model identified in Issue 1?
 - (b) For each of the LECs identified in (a), what cost results from using the input values identified in Issue 3 in the cost proxy model identified in Issue 1?
- 5. (a) For purposes of determining the cost of basic local telecommunications service appropriate for establishing a permanent universal service mechanism, should the cost of basic local telecommunications service for each of the LECs that serve fewer than 100,000 access lines be computed using the cost proxy model identified in Issue 1 with the input values identified in Issue 3?
 - (b) If yes, for each of the LECs that serve fewer than 100,000 access lines, what cost results from using the input values identified in Issue 3 in the cost proxy model identified in Issue 1?
 - (c) If not, for each of the Florida LECs that serve fewer than 100,000 access lines, what approach should be employed to determine the cost of basic local telecommunications service and what is the resulting cost?

Dear Chairman Johnson:

As you are well aware, during the 1998 Session, the Legislature passed Chapter 277-98, Laws of Florida, enacting substantial revisions to Chapter 364, Florida Statutes, relating to telecommunications services and the rate structure for intrastate telecommunications services in this State. In this legislation, the Commission was asked to perform several studies and report its findings back to the Legislature on February 15, 1999. As part of the Legislature's mandate, the Commission was specifically asked to conduct a study and render a report as to the fair and reasonable rate for residential basic local telecommunications in the State of Florida. Additionally the Commission was asked to determine and report the total forward-looking economic costs of providing basic local residential service in this State to assist the Legislature in establishing a permanent universal service mechanism.

It has come to my attention that the workshop for the fair and reasonable rate project was concluded on October 9, 1998 with final comments due from the participants on November 13, 1998. It has also come to my attention that the hearing in the universal service docket was concluded on October 16, 1998 with post-hearing briefs due on November 2, 1998. I would like to take this opportunity to express my views with respect to these two reports currently pending before the Commission.

It is important that the Commission's findings be consistent with Federal law contained in the Telecommunications Act of 1996. Section 254(k) of the Federal Telecommunications Act of 1996 mandates that:

the States, with respect to intrastate services, shall establish any necessary cost allocation rules, accounting safeguards, and guidelines to ensure that services included in the definition of universal services bear no more than a reasonable share of the joint and common costs of facilities used to provide those services.

The industry proposals for both universal service and fair and reasonable rates would allocate to basic residential service a disproportional share of the common cost of the facilities used in providing basic residential service. The "loop," i.e., the facilities used for the connection between the central office and the consumer's telephone for the provision of basic service is also used to carry other "vertical services," e.g., long distance, voice mail, call waiting, call forwarding, and other advanced services. Industry claims that residential services are being subsidized are hinged upon the assumption that the residential basic rate should recover the entire cost of the local loop. However, the industry claims are contrary to the Federal Telecommunications Act of 1996. Consistent with the Act, the appropriate revenues to use in the Commission's determination must be the revenues from all services which use, share, and benefit from the use of the loop. I believe the Public Service Commission has the total revenue figures which include the incremental cost and revenue amount. Application of this principle rebuts the assertions of the incumbent local exchange companies and leads to the unavoidable conclusion that there is no need for a universal service fund at this time in light of the fact that the revenue stream from all services provided by the loop is highly profitable. The theory of a universal service fund was not to repay companies for service to outlying areas, or because of lower profitability, but to assure the LEC's ability to serve these areas are not eroded by competition. In fact, the lack of meaningful competition in both residential and business services argues against such an expensive mechanism.

During the floor debates before the House in April, 1998, I was concerned that HB 4785 assumed there is a need for a permanent universal service fund mechanism. Consequently, on April 28, 1998, I had an exchange with the sponsors of the bill whereby they confirmed on the record that there is nothing in the bill which precludes the Commission from including a finding that there is presently no need for universal service support. I am bringing this matter to your attention, so the Commission is aware that this option is available under the bill.

The industry uses the same argument to support its claim that basic residential service is being provided at less than cost; i.e., that basic residential service is being subsidized by other services; that the basic residential service subsidies constitute a barrier to competition and that a rate increase for the residential market will attract competition. The industry claims are unfounded for several reasons. Potential competitors will evaluate their opportunity not just based upon revenues from basic residential service, but based upon revenues from total services, which in Florida are substantial. The experience of the local exchange companies in Florida, including BellSouth, offers compelling evidence that the stalled development of competition in the local residential market, if any is attributable to reasons other than the profitability of the local exchange market. Notwithstanding restrictions imposed upon BellSouth by a Stipulation confirmed by Commission Order in 1994 and codified in Section 364.385(3), Florida Statutes, BellSouth's earnings performance has been impressive. For example, under the Stipulation, BellSouth refunded to customers $123.5 million from 1997 earnings, while earning 15.11% under its sharing agreement that expires at the end of 1997. It is also significant that BellSouth's earnings performance has been achieved with the lowest access rates in the State. Moreover, BellSouth's projected earnings for 1998 represent a 22% return on equity. Over two-thirds of BellSouth's customers are residential customers, and the company is thriving. Sprint and GTE earnings for 1999 are also projected to be well over the 20% range. Clearly, profitability in the local exchange markets is not a barrier to competition.

I believe the views set forth above are supported by the evidence and comments which have been presented to the Commission in the pending proceedings. Accordingly, I urge the Commission to make appropriate findings necessary to assist the Legislature in assuring a rate structure for basic and nonbasic service which is fair, just, and equitable to the consumers of this State and consistent with the goals of universal service.

Therefore, the request of the LEC's to raise residential rates for basic telephone service and to establish an expensive permanent universal fund mechanism, if granted, would result not only in a windfall to already very profitable monopoly companies, but also produce a huge revenue stream to subsidize predatory pricing practices for business and access services. The result, from a public policy perspective, would be to establish new barriers to entry by potential competitors and new entrants. To make matters worse, the cost for this obstruction to competition would be born by Florida's residential rate payers.

Thank you for this opportunity to communicate my thoughts and concerns. Please do not hesitate to contact me if you have any questions or wish to discuss any of these matters further with me.

Sincerely,

R. Z. "Sandy" Safley

RE: Docket No. 980696-TP

PROPRIETARY INFORMATION ENCLOSED

Dear Mrs. Bayo:

On October 9, 1998, AT&T filed the Supplemental Rebuttal Testimony of Catherine Petzinger. The testimony of Ms. Petzinger refers to an Exhibit No. CEP-2 which contains proprietary information. Exhibit CEP-2 was inadvertently omitted from the confidential filing.

Enclosed please find the proprietary copy of CEP-2 which should be included with the proprietary copy of Ms. Petzinger's supplemental rebuttal testimony. I apologize for any confusion.

Confidential Exhibit CEP-2 consists of pages extracted from BellSouth's switch vendor contracts. This information is highly proprietary confidential business information belonging to BellSouth and is being filed in accordance with Rule 25-22.006(5), Florida Administrative Code. Pursuant to this Rule, please treat the enclosed information as confidential and proprietary business information. Since the pages are confidential in their entirety, redacted copies can not be provided.

Thank you for your assistance in this matter.

Sincerely,

Tracy Hatch
