We are Florida Public Utilities customers and were recently told of an interim rate increase for the purpose of recouping losses due to Hurricane Michael. Pardon my frankness, but to whom do we receive reimbursement from due to Hurricane Michael? How is it right to further burden the survivors of Hurricane Michael by making us pay for your business costs? Can you not recognize that we have our own losses to deal with? We are here trying to rebuild and many of us do not have the liberty of extracting reimbursements from some other entity.

Thank you,

P.S. We used to be West Florida Electric customers. Perhaps you could compare their rates to what FPU offers. It may be enlightening. No pun intended.
