Subject: FPL Proposed Rate Increase

I am against FPL's proposed rate hike. They claim it is needed to expand solar panels for their "SolarTogether" program. That program has failed to lure in Customers. Only 50,000 Customers have signed up for it. Over 5 MILLION other Customers have rejected it. So why force us to pay for something we didn't demand? The market has spoken and we want cheap rates, not forced tithes to some Cult that believes in man made global warming scam. Let those "Believers" pay for their own religion. I am a poor Citizen that shouldn't have to pay. This rate increase is basically a "mandate" and "penalty" based on a religious ideology called "global warming".

And I'm guessing FPL will also be getting "green energy" subsidies from the Federal government for this expansion of solar panels?. So essentially, we have already been extorted and robbed and FPL is ganging on top of that. FPL should do with what they have already stolen from other "green" taxes and fees. Wasn't that the purpose of those in the first place? So they get to tax and tax and tax on top of that?

And if solar is such a great idea, shouldn't FPL be REDUCING our rates going forward once the infrastructure is built? Free energy from the Sun, right? Then DROP our rates. Why should the Consumer pay for FPL to save money on their own costs? FPL should consider it in "investment". The solar reduces their costs going forward and they charge the Consumer the same rate but they make more profit. Isn't that how free markets are supposed to function? If Consumers are fronting this Capital investment, via cronyism, then we should be given back the profits. FPL doesn't like that? Then invest and speculate with your own damn Capital and you can then pocket the extra profits. Consumers shouldn't be forced to gamble on green energy dreams when stagflation is our current nightmare. If FPL can't keep rates steady, then let COMPETITORS come into the market and they will without the virtue signaling. And they will figure out the mix of energy sources to do it cheap.

And what happens when natural events like hurricanes plow through these solar fields and scatter them to pieces? Oxidation? Will Consumers once again pay to fix the damage? It wasn't our idea to use Solar. We were content with secure natural gas, nuclear, or coal power plants that don't budge during a storm and can ramp up production quickly once the storm passes. So if FPL is charging us to build them, make them set aside a portion as "insurance" to rebuild this fragile solar if a storm destroys it so we don't end up getting fleeced once again. Funny how Capital losses and investments are always the burden of the Consumer regarding FPL. Isn't it nice to have a monopoly? Let's be honest, FPL is just manipulating the climate change debate so they can rip off Consumers again.
