Dear Florida Public Service Commissioners,

I have been a FPL residential customer for more than 25 years. Overall, I have been very satisfied with their level of service, including timely response to outages from storms, and the value received for the amount I pay for electricity. In addition, their current work to underground all electric service in Coral Gables, Florida (where I reside) is impressive and will ensure long term reliable service. However, FPL's request to increase their allowable Return on Equity (ROE) up to 11.9% is excessive and far exceeds the national average for public utilities.

FPL's operational success and a strong Florida economy have allowed, and will continue to allow, FPL to attract sufficient capital to invest in new infrastructure. A rate increase request, to the extent it is for a higher ROE than they are currently entitled to, is unnecessary for FPL to achieve their mandated level of service, would provide excessive profit, and is unfair to customers. I urge the commission to adjust the FPL rate request to provide no increase in their ROE.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Jonathan Wyner
