Re: Docket No. 20260026-GU – Application for Rate Increase by Florida City Gas.

Dear Mr. Teitzman:

Attached for filing, please find the Rebuttal Testimony of Terry Deason for Florida City Gas.

Thank you for your assistance with this filing. As always, please don't hesitate to let me know if you have any questions whatsoever.

Sincerely,

Beth Keating

1    I.     Introduction

2    Q.     Please state your name, occupation and business address.

3    A.     My name is Terry Deason. My business address is 4377 NW Torreya Park Road,
4           Bristol, Florida 32321. I am self-employed as a Special Consultant specializing in the 5           fields of energy, telecommunications, water and wastewater, and public utilities
6           generally.

7    Q.     Have you previously filed direct testimony in this docket?

8    A.     Yes, I filed direct testimony on behalf of Florida City Gas, which I refer to herein as 9           either “the Company” or “FCG.”

10   Q.     Has your employment status and job responsibilities remained the same as 11       discussed in your previous testimony?

12   A.     Yes.

13   Q.     Are you providing any exhibits with your rebuttal testimony?

14   A.     No.

15

16   II.    Purpose and Summary of Testimony

17   Q.     What is the purpose of your rebuttal testimony?

18   A.     The purpose of my rebuttal testimony is to respond to the testimony of OPC witness 19           Helmuth W. Schultz, III. More specifically, I rebut Mr. Schultz’s recommendation to 20           discontinue recognition of the acquisition adjustment resulting from the 2004
21           acquisition of FCG by AGL Resources, including his erroneous analysis of the 22           Commission’s five factor test. I also briefly address Mr. Schultz’s recommendation 23           to disallow certain rate case expenses.

1

2 III. The 2004 Acquisition Adjustment

3 Q. What is the amount of the 2004 acquisition adjustment being questioned by Mr.
4 Schultz?

5 A. The Commission originally approved an acquisition adjustment of $21.7 million to 6 be amortized over a 30-year period or approximately $0.7 million per year. Currently,
7 the unamortized portion remaining is a little over $5 million.

8 Q. On what basis did the Commission originally approve the acquisition 9 adjustment?

10 A. The Commission applied its traditionally used five-factor test. Based on the favorable
11 outcomes of these factors, the Commission approved the acquisition adjustment, 12 subject to future reevaluation.

13 Q. Over the twenty plus years since it was originally approved, has the unamortized 14 portion of the acquisition adjustment remained in FCG's rate base along with 15 recognition of its annual amortization?

16 A. Yes, it has. This is the case even though there have been subsequent acquisitions and 17 intervening rate cases since it was originally approved.

18 Q How was the acquisition adjustment treated in FCG's most recent rate
19 proceeding?

20 A. In short, as Mr. Schultz describes at pages 43-44 of his testimony, it continued to be 21 recognized and amortized, and the rates reflected this outcome. However, a new issue
22 was raised by OPC that eventually led to an appeal to the Supreme Court of Florida.
23 The Court rejected OPC's argument in its June 4, 2026, decision in Citizens of the

1 State of Florida v. Florida Public Service Commission, Case No. SC2023-0988 (“2022
2 Appeal Decision”), and thus the acquisition adjustment remains in rate base to this 3 day.

4 Q. What was the argument advanced by OPC which the Court rejected?

5 A. OPC relied on two Commission Orders applicable to water and wastewater companies
6 to argue that the Commission has a policy to erase any previously recognized
7 acquisition adjustment when a subsequent acquisition takes place. The Court found
8 that no such policy exists for gas utilities and even cited a previous Commission
9 decision involving Peoples Gas System in which the Commission specifically allowed 10 the continued recognition of an acquisition adjustment despite a subsequent 11 acquisition.

12 Q. Are you familiar with the two water and wastewater cases previously relied upon 13 by OPC?

14 A. Yes, I participated as a Commissioner in both of those cases. In short, OPC’s reliance 15 on these two cases for the position it advocated was misplaced, as confirmed by the 16 Supreme Court. I explain this in detail in my direct testimony and will not repeat it
17 here. Please note that my direct testimony was filed before the Court issued its Order
18 addressing OPC’s appeal.

19 Q. Given the Court’s decision, on what basis is Mr. Schultz recommending the 20 discontinuance of the 2004 acquisition adjustment?

21 A. Despite the Court’s decision, Mr. Schultz continues to argue that a change in 22 ownership extinguishes the acquisition adjustment and that the five-factor test is “no 23 longer relevant or applicable.” (Schultz, pg. 41, line 24).

1   Q.     Do you agree with his assessment?

2   A.     No, I do not. The Commission's policy to use the five-factor test is still applicable
3           and should once again be used to determine whether the 2004 acquisition adjustment
4           should continue. Moreover, the Commission explicitly stated in Order No. PSC-2023-
5           0177-FOF-GU, on page 27, that the continuance of the acquisition adjustment would 6           be reviewed under the five factor test historically applied by the Commission.

7   Q.     Does Mr. Schultz address the Commission's decision in Docket No. 20170179-
8           GU?

9   A.     Yes, he does, at pages 42 and 43. This was a rate case filed by FCG in 2017 that was 10          ultimately decided by the Commission's approval of a settlement between the parties.
11          OPC was a party to this settlement.

12   A.     How does Mr. Schultz characterize the treatment of the acquisition adjustment 13          in that case?

14   A.     He indicates, at page 42, that because the case was resolved by approval of a "black 15          box" settlement, continued recovery of the acquisition adjustment was not approved
16          in Docket No. 20170179-GU.

17   Q.     Do you agree with his implication?

18   A.     I agree that the 2017 case was resolved by a settlement, and as is true with most 19          Commission settlements, it did not contain specified outcomes for all identified issues.
20          And he is correct that the Parties provided a data response regarding the settlement
21          indicating that the settlement itself did not contain provisions adjusting the acquisition
22          adjustment or disallowing it. His Exhibit HWS-5, at pages 309-310, contains the full 23          data request response of the Company provided in that docket, which also notes that

1 no other party to the docket had provided any testimony or position with regard to the 2 acquisition adjustment. However, I believe his assessment that continued recovery of 3 the acquisition adjustment was not approved may be placing form over substance. The 4 rates resulting from the stipulation reflected the continued recognition of the 5 acquisition adjustment. And, in its 2022 Decision, the Supreme Court noted, at page 6 28, that the Commission approved the 2017 settlement without removing the 7 acquisition adjustment.

8 Q. Does Mr. Schultz also have misgivings about the Commission's decision in FCG's
9 next rate case in Docket No. 20220069-GU?

10 A. Yes, it is quite evident from page 44 of his testimony that he has misgivings about 11 both the Commission's decision as well as the Court's decision upholding it. While it 12 is unclear whether Mr. Schultz is referring to the rationale of the Commission or the 13 Court or both, he states at lines 8-9 that he is concerned that the rationale provided 14 perhaps did not reflect a full understanding of the issue. Again, on page 44, he 15 expresses his concern that the Court stated that the Commission does not have an 16 acquisition adjustment policy applicable to gas utilities and even so, the Commission 17 clings to the five-factor rationale as policy.

18 Q. Do you agree with Mr. Schultz's concerns?

19 A. No, I do not. He is incorrect in his belief that the Court stated that the Commission
20 does not have an acquisition adjustment policy applicable to gas utilities. The Court
21 addressed and specifically rejected OPC's argument that the Commission has a policy
22 applicable to all utilities that an intervening acquisition erases any previously

1 approved acquisition adjustment.<sup>1</sup> The Court made no pronouncements regarding the 2 five-factor test. It is abundantly clear that the Commission has a well-defined and long
3 adhered to policy to apply its five-factor test to evaluate an initial acquisition 4 adjustment as well as subsequent evaluations of existing acquisition adjustments.

5 Q. Even with his misgivings, does Mr. Schultz nevertheless address the five-factor 6 test?

7 A. Yes, he does. However, his approach is misapplied to the point that it is meaningless.

8 Q. Please explain.

9 A. Despite the Court's ruling that a subsequent acquisition does not nullify a previously
10 approved acquisition adjustment, Mr. Schultz opines that a traditional five-factor test 11 analysis should be moot since the acquisition adjustment in question was applicable to 12 a 2007 rate case and has been allowed to continue through multiple subsequent 13 acquisitions without proper justification. (Schultz, pgs. 44-45). He then takes the 14 liberty of applying his own noncompliant approach to conclude that the previously 15 approved 2004 acquisition should be discontinued.

16 Q. Do you agree with Mr. Schultz's theory that the previously approved 2004 17 acquisition adjustment has been allowed to continue through multiple subsequent 18 acquisitions without proper justification?

19 A. I agree that the 2004 acquisition adjustment has been allowed to continue through 20 multiple subsequent acquisitions. However, I adamantly disagree with his assessment
21 that this has happened without proper justification. At every step, whether through a

1 litigated proceeding or by virtue of an approved settlement, the Commission has made
2 adequate assessments based on competent evidence to allow the 2004 acquisition
3 adjustment to continue. To state otherwise is to suggest that the Commission has failed
4 to fulfill its statutorily defined responsibilities. Additionally, the Supreme Court found
5 that the Commission's decision was supported by competent, substantial evidence, 6 specifically rejecting OPC's arguments to the contrary. The Court even went so far as 7 to say that, at least in the gas utilities context, the Commission has a "history of 8 continuing acquisition adjustments." <sup>2</sup>

9 Q. You earlier described Mr. Schultz's approach as being noncompliant with the 10 traditional five-factor test. What do you mean by this?

11 A. Under the traditional five-factor test, cost savings are calculated by starting with costs 12 which existed at the time of the initial acquisition and then escalating them year by 13 year for customer growth and inflation. The escalated costs are then compared to 14 current actual or projected costs to determine if savings continue to exist. Positive net 15 savings indicate that the acquisition remains cost effective under the five-factor test.

16 Q. Is this the approach used by Mr. Schultz?

17 A. No, it is not. He chooses 2023 as his base, even though the acquisition took place in 18 2004. He essentially ignores all the intervening years to yield a distorted result. It 19 needs to be emphasized that an appropriate reevaluation of an existing acquisition 20 adjustment needs to account for all the intervening years, not just a chosen few. In 21 essence, Mr. Schultz ignores all the substantial savings that have been achieved for the 22 benefit of customers from the time the acquisition was consummated until the present.

1   Q.     Does FCG Witness Everngam calculate the relevant cost comparisons consistent
2       with the traditional five-factor test?

3   A.     Yes, he does. As shown in his corrected Exhibit ME-3, he begins with the correct base 4       and then escalates it for all the intervening years.

5   Q.     You earlier said that Mr. Schultz ignores the substantial savings that the 6       acquisition has created from the time that it was consummated until the present.
7       Could you please explain this statement?

8   A.     Yes, and the correct place to begin is at the beginning. In its original decision to 9       approve the acquisition by AGL (Order No. PSC-2007-0193-PAA-GU), the 10      Commission identified gross annual savings of $5,080,000, consisting of $4,170,000
11      of O&M savings, along with financing cost savings of $415,000, and $495,000
12      associated with the release of excess gas supply capacity. The total gross annual 13      savings of $5,080,000 were then netted against the revenue requirement on the 14      associated unamortized balances and their associated annual amortizations, to result
15      in a net annual savings of $831,361. So, from the outset the Commission determined
16      that the AGL acquisition would save customers over $830,000 annually. This is a 17      significantly large benefit in comparison to an initial acquisition adjustment of 18      $21,656,835. Mr. Schultz's analysis ignores these significant benefits that have 19      accrued to the benefit of customers over the last twenty plus years.

20   Q.     Did the unamortized balances and the annual amortizations calculated by the 21       Commission include only the acquisition adjustment?

22   A.     No, and this is another significant factor. The Commission also included unamortized
23      balances associated with transaction & transition costs and transferred pension

1 obligations. This substantially reduced the initial net annual savings. Had the 2 Commission netted the gross annual savings of $5,080,000 only against the revenue 3 requirements associated with the acquisition adjustment, the net annual savings of the 4 acquisition would have increased to $1,201,484.

5 Q. Are you suggesting that the Commission erred by including the transaction and 6 transition costs and the pension obligations?

7 A. No, not at all. I mention it because including those costs in the early years has a 8 significant impact on the early years but yields much greater savings in subsequent 9 years. This is because the transaction and transition costs were amortized over five 10 years and the pension obligations over a period much shorter than thirty years. The 11 Commission estimated that the pension obligations would be fully amortized over 13.3
12 years. Stated differently, the transaction & transition costs along with the pension 13 obligations have long since been eliminated, allowing even greater net savings to flow
14 to customers from the acquisition adjustment. All else being equal, after the five-year 15 amortization for the transaction and transition costs the annual net savings would have 16 increased to $1,068,674. And after the elimination of the pension obligations, the net 17 annual savings would have increased to $1,201.484.

18 Q. Was the Commission aware of these impacts when it initially approved the AGL
19 acquisition?

20 A. Yes, the Commission was fully aware of these dynamics. On page 7 of its Order 21 initially approving the AGL acquisition adjustment the Commission stated: Because 22 we are approving a 5-year amortization period for transaction and transition costs
23 later in this Order, the transaction and transition costs will be fully amortized by

1        November 2009. The pension costs will also be fully amortized over a shorter
2        timeframe than the acquisition adjustment. As the acquisition adjustment and 3        regulatory assets are amortized, the impact will be to increase the net savings,
4        assuming savings in O&M expenses remain unchanged.

5        Q.    You used the phrase all else being equal. What do you mean by this?

6        A.    As the Commission noted, it is assumed that the O&M, or Operations and 7        Maintenance, expenses remain the same (except for the impacts of customer growth
8        and inflation). If O&M expenses increase beyond customer growth and inflation, net 9        savings will marginally decrease. Likewise, if O&M expenses decrease relative to 10       customer growth and inflation, net savings will marginally increase.

11       Q.    Do you think this is a reasonable assumption to make?

12       A.    Yes, not only do I consider it reasonable, but I also consider it conservative. I make 13       this judgment for two reasons. First, over the intervening twenty plus years, the 14       Commission has not made a finding that there has been an increase in O&M costs
15       sufficient to discontinue this acquisition adjustment. Second, as Mr. Everngam's 16       revised Exhibit ME-3 shows, O&M costs have decreased significantly relative to 17       customer growth and inflation.

18       Q.    What is your conclusion?

19       A.    I conclude that the AGL acquisition has in the intervening twenty plus years provided 20       significant net benefits for the benefit of customers and that those significant benefits 21       continue to this day. Accordingly, Mr. Schultz's recommendation to discontinue the 22       AGL acquisition adjustment should be rejected.

23

1    IV.    Rate Case Expense

2    Q.    Does Mr. Schultz recommend disallowances of rate case expense in this
3    proceeding?

4    A.    Yes, he recommends several disallowances for different reasons. Among these, he 5    recommends that an allowance for the cost of preparing, presenting, and defending my 6    testimony be disallowed. He bases his recommendation on his assertion that my 7    testimony is redundant and biased. (Schultz, pg. 111, lines 8-11).

8    Q.    Is your testimony redundant to that of other witnesses?

9    A.    No, it is not redundant. My testimony addresses significant policy matters not 10    addressed by other FCG witnesses. Ironically, it is OPC's own actions that make my 11    testimony necessary. Hopefully, my testimony will assist in the development of an 12    accurate and complete record upon which the Commission may rely to more fully 13    consider and address these significant policy questions.

14   Q.    Please explain.

15   A.    In contesting the continued recognition of FCG's 2004 acquisition adjustment in 16   FCG's last rate case in Docket No. 20220069-GU, it was the OPC that chose to cross
17   industry lines and to argue that two rather innocuous decisions in two Commission 18   decisions applicable to the water and wastewater industry should be interpreted to 19   automatically dissolve the 2004 acquisition adjustment as a matter of policy. OPC
20   argued that, based on this claimed policy, the Commission no longer had the discretion
21   to consider the merits of continuing the 2004 acquisition adjustment. The Commission 22   disagreed and decided to retain the 2004 acquisition adjustment and to retain its 23   discretion to make such determinations.

1     Q.     Did the Commission's decision to retain its discretion resolve the issue?

2     A.     No, it did not. OPC chose to appeal that decision to the Supreme Court of Florida. As 3           I described earlier, the Supreme Court rejected OPC's arguments. However, the 4           Supreme Court's decision came after I filed my direct testimony in this case. Given
5           that there was not yet a decision from the Court, I was tasked with the job to provide 6           testimony to more thoroughly discuss the policy implications of OPC's arguments.

7     Q.     Did the Court's Order finally resolve the issue?

8     A.     One could reasonably conclude that it should have. However, given OPC's further 9           arguments in this case, expressed through the testimony of Mr. Schultz and his new,
10          unsupported approach to calculate net savings from the 2004 acquisition, OPC's 11          continued litigation of this acquisition adjustment has made it necessary for me to also 12          provide this rebuttal testimony.

13    Q.     Is your testimony biased as asserted by Mr. Schultz?

14    A.     No, it is not. Mr. Schultz's claim of bias apparently stems from the fact that I
15          participated as a Commissioner on the two water and wastewater cases I earlier
16          discussed and upon which OPC based its claim of a discontinuance of policy
17          applicable to gas utilities. He offers no other explanation of his assertion of bias as it
18          pertains to my testimony. I can, of course, only speak for myself, but in this context, I
19          find it important and necessary to address Mr. Schultz's concerns. Certainly, I do not 20          perceive my testimony, or my prior decisions as a Commissioner, to reflect inordinate 21          bias beyond personal bias based on belief in my own experience and expertise in 22          regulatory accounting and Commission policy over the past several decades. I also 23          fully recognize and understand that it is OPC's role, as well as that of its hired experts,

1 to test the utility's case and cast doubt upon the assertions of its witnesses. That is 2 completely fair and part of the regulatory compact. However, when it comes to 3 allegations of bias, I feel compelled to provide some measure of a response.

4 First, all Commissioners take an oath of office in which they swear to be unbiased.
5 So, any decision from the Commission can be presumed to be based on an unbiased
6 evaluation of the record evidence in which all parties are given their due process. This 7 would naturally apply to my participation and vote on the two water and wastewater 8 cases currently at issue. If I was not biased at the time of the vote in those two cases,
9 then I suppose the issue is whether I have now become biased in my post-Commission 10 life.

11 Certainly, I may reach different conclusions when presented with different sets of 12 facts, but the essence of my understanding and approach to regulatory policy and 13 accounting treatment within the utility regulatory regime remains unchanged.
14 Moreover, with regard to decisions in which I participated, I stand by my assessment
15 of the record and arguments presented, unless and until it can be demonstrated to me
16 that I erred. Again, different sets of facts may require a different result, but to the best
17 of my recollection and ability, I have adhered to, and advocated for, regulatory policies
18 and accounting treatments that are consistent throughout my career. To do otherwise 19 would risk my credibility, which, frankly, I am not willing to do. As such, when 20 discussing decisions in which I participated, my approach is to address them in the 21 same manner I did when I was the decision maker – based upon the facts presented in 22 the record before me. As Warren Buffet said: "It takes 20 years to build a reputation 23 and five minutes to ruin it." Thus, while I am a paid, expert witness in this case, the

1 actual analysis I provide is based upon my expertise, experience, and the information
2 presented to me. My opinions, however, as to the appropriate application of regulatory 3 policy are not for sale.
4

5 V. Conclusion

6 Q. What is your conclusion?

7 A. I conclude that the 2004 acquisition adjustment continues to provide benefits to 8 customers and should remain in rate base along with its annual amortization. Mr.
9 Schultz's recommendation to the contrary is based on a faulty analysis and should be 10 rejected. I further conclude that there should be no disallowance of the rate case
11 expense allowance for my testimony. Both my direct as well as my rebuttal testimony 12 are not redundant to that of other witnesses.

13 Q. Does this conclude your rebuttal testimony?

14 A. Yes.

CERTIFICATE OF SERVICE

I HEREBY CERTIFY that a true and correct copy of the foregoing Rebuttal Testimony of Terry Deason has been furnished by Electronic Mail and/or Electronic Data Room access to the following parties of record this 13th day of August, 2026:
